EARN, RENEW, AND KEEP YOUR CERTIFICATION:

BE AMONG THE BEST

Set your facility and rehab program apart by having the most knowledgeable and skilled rehab nursing staff available. The CRRN credential has been widely recognized and respected for more than 30 years. CRRN is the credential for nurses who assist individuals with disabilities and chronic illness to restore, maintain, and promote optimal health. Employers encourage nurses to get certified or hire CRRNs create an environment that shows their commitment to their team and their patients.

IMPROVE PATIENT OUTCOMES

A study published in Rehabilitation Nursing Journal found a correlation between the percentage of registered nurses certified in rehabilitation nursing at a facility and the patient length of stay. Specifically, for every 6% increase in CRRNs on the unit, the average length of stay decreased by one day. This demonstrates the tangible benefits of certification to both patients and healthcare organizations.

DEMONSTRATE DEDICATION AND EXPERTISE

When you earn, continue to use, and then keep your CRRN designation, you demonstrate your dedication and expertise to the rehabilitation specialty. The CRRN credential requires two years of experience in rehabilitation nursing and that you pass the CRRN examination validating a documented level of knowledge of the specialty.
